OVERVIEW

Sustainability and Collaborative workshop

This sustainable workshop is split into two parts, a presentation of references and hands-on making.

The first section introduces references from my own practice alongside other artists and designers working with sustainability, reuse, and material-led approaches.

The second section is practical and collaborative. Participants will work in small groups exploring a range of mending and making techniques, including darning, boro and sashiko, and creating their own yarns, fabrics, and woven surfaces. Using painting inspiration images from books as a starting point, each group will experiment with composition, texture, and repair to develop their own material responses to their groups images.
